

WHEN THE SKY TURNED BLUE

PRUDENCE EMUDIANUGHE

ABOUT THE BOOK

What if your voice could change your whole town?

After losing her friend to an asthma attack caused by pollution, TJ decides to take a stand. With her friends and a club called Young Green Voices, she starts a movement to clean up their community, fight climate change, and speak up—no matter the odds.

Set in the South-South of Nigeria, When the Sky Turned Blue is an inspiring story of friendship, courage, and what happens when young people decide to lead the change.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Prudence Okeoghene Emudianughe is a multifaceted professional with a passion for strategic communications, fact-checking, and innovative storytelling. As a PhD Candidate in Journalism and Media Studies at the University of Port Harcourt, Prudence explores the intersection of artificial intelligence and journalism. She is also a filmmaker, poet, and writer, advocating for health awareness and empowerment through her work.

Currently, she is a National health fellow representing Ethiope West Local Government Area, Delta State, the Chief Operations Officer at MyAIFactChecker, the Content and Media Strategist at the Global Activists Network and the Programs Lead for the FactCheckAfrica AI Journalism Fellowship Program, West Africa which has trained over 70 Journalists on how to ethically integrate AI tools into their journalistic practice.

Additionally, Prudence made her directorial debut with a short film in October 2021, and worked as a Video Editor for the Anambra Broadcasting Service. She was a delegate at the Peking University, China: YenChing Global Symposium 2022, African Center for Strategic Studies and a fellow at the AI and Tech Accountability fellowship with the AI collective Nigeria and the Center for Journalism Innovation and Development.

ISBN: 978-978-695-636-7